Global Human Resources Consulting Firm Opens Denver Office
Trish Beck Appointed Vice President To Lead New Office

Denver (June, 2009) – BPI group, a leading global human resources consulting and career management firm, has opened a Denver office to continue the North American expansion of its services for organizations and individuals. BPI group is one of the world's largest management and human resources consultancies with headquarters in Paris, France.

To lead the new Denver office, BPI group named human resources veteran Trish Beck as vice president. For more than 28 years, Beck has served as a human resources executive and key member of global leadership teams at Fortune 500 firms, including First Data/Western Union, Lufthansa, Transamerica, Kraft Foods and BP/Amoco. Prior to joining BPI group, she was senior human resources executive for Exclusive Resorts, the Denver-based luxury destination vacation club.

“With our Denver office, BPI group is well positioned to serve the strong base of corporations throughout the Rocky Mountain region, as well as offer our customized career consulting solutions to help organizations achieve success and manage change,” said Juan Luis Goujon, BPI group, North America President and CEO. “Our clients both locally and nationally will greatly benefit from Trish’s business experience in helping organizations that are embarking on strategic changes and new directions.”

Throughout her corporate career, Beck led human resources aspects of mergers, acquisitions and divestitures both nationally and internationally. Her commitment to professional development includes serving as president of the board of directors for the Human Resources Management Association of Chicago.

In the Denver community, Beck serves as president of the Cherry Creek East Village Association and as vice chair for the Cherry Creek Steering Committee, a city council-appointed advisory board. In 2008, she served as a director for the Democratic National Convention in Denver, where she was a key member of the leadership team that organized 15,000 volunteers. Beck has been an adjunct graduate school faculty member at Loyola Chicago, Benedictine University and University of Denver’s Daniels School of Business, where she continues as a guest speaker and executive mentor. Beck is also on the advisory board for the University of Colorado’s Bard Center graduate school for entrepreneurship.

The Denver office is located in suburban Greenwood Village. Through each of its offices, BPI group offers a comprehensive continuum of highly personalized human resources, career management, and coaching and advisory services for the life stages of any organization or individual. These services include talent management, leadership development, executive coaching, and career and workforce transition. All offices have access to global services and resources.
